WEDNESDAY EVENING, DEC'R 5.

MOUNTAINS IN THE MOON .- It is an ascer tained fact that there are three classes of lunar mountains. The first of these consists of isolat ed, separate, distinct mountains of a very curious character. The distinguishing characteristic of these mountains is this-they start up from a plaid quite suddenly. On the earth it is wel known that mountains generally go in ranges of groups; but we find these isolated lunar moun tains standing up entirely apart, never having been connected with any range. The one named Pico is nine thousand feet high; this mountain has the form of an immense sugar-loaf, and if our readers can imagine a fairly proportioned sugar loaf 9000 feet in beight, and themselves situated upon it, so as to be able to look down from its apex, they will have an appropriate idea of the appearance of Pico. There are other mountains of a similar description scattered over the moon's surface, and these mountains not only stand apart from each other, but what is still more remarkable, the plains on which they stand are but slightly disturbed. How singular, then, the influence which shot the mountain up 9000 feet, and yet scarcely disturbed the plain in the immediate neighborhood. The second class of lunar elevations consists of mountain ranges. Now, this is the principal feature of the monotains on earth. This phenomenon is also found in the moon; but there is an exception; only two principal ranges are found, and these appear to have been originally only one range. Oue is called the Appenines. It is so well seen that just as the line of light is passing through the moon, you will think it is, generally speaking, a crack in its surface, but a telescope of ordinary power will at once manifest it to be a range of moun tains. The lunar Appenines may be compared with the loftiest range of mountains upon earth. It is 18,000 feet high, and there is another still higher, rising 25,000 feet above its base. In this feature, then, the moon corresponds with the earth, but with this difference -what is the rule on the earth is the exception n the moon.

WOLFF'S ACME BLACKING-Its lustre and blackness of color is unrivalled by any other blacking. It is more protection to the leather than oils, because its use will shield the leather against the continual changes from wet to dry. It is absolutely waterproof, requires no brushing to become glossy, and retains its polish for several weeks through rain, slush or snow. It is suitable alike for men's boots or ladies' and childrens' shoes. For sale by WARFIELD & HALL

CHROMO PHOTOGRAPHY.

By this art an ordinary Photograph can be transformed into a FINELY FINISHED ART PICTURE, strongly resembling Porcelain ART PICTURE, strongly resembling Porcelain Ministures, and attracting the admiration of albeholders. Yet all this can be accomplished at a very slight cost by any person of ordinary skill and intelligence, and a picture of compastively trifling cost, rendered fifty times more valuable at a very small outlay of time and ma

This art is particularly adapted to ladies and others who are seeking light employment, whether for amusement or profit, and especially those who have skill in, or taste for, using oil or water colors, though it can easily be learned by all. No acquaintance with photography is needed to produce these pictures. If sold they readily command $3 for card size and $5 for cabinet size, each, with frames.

Briefly, the process consists in transferring the photographic print to a convex glass, manufac-tured expressly for the purpose, which is done by the use of the Adhesive Preparation accompanying Brownell's outfit

It is then rendered transparent by means of the Diaphanous L'quid, (sold only in connection with Brownell's outfit,) and another glass being used, the picture is colored and finished in the manner elaborately and fully described in the Instructions accompanying the outfit, which are improved and more complete than any other de-tails which have been given to the public.

Directions for mixing and using b th Oil and Water Colors are given, in addition to other necessary items, with Brownell's outfit—a neat Black Walnut Hinged Case, containing all materials necessary for this beautiful work, costing only $2.50 and $5.00 each, according to size. With the Diaphanous Liquid, Transparency can be secured in twenty minutes All materials for Chromo Photography, in cluding Brownell's Outlits, Convex G a.s, Velvet Frames, best quality, of all sizes and descriptions. Card Board, Colors, &c., &c., &c., are supplied wholesale and retail by GEO. E. FRENCH,
